Series B £50 Note

This is a transcript of text in the video titled “Series B £50 Note”.

Turlough O’Carolan, born in 1670, was a blind Celtic harper, composer and singer. Widely regarded as Ireland’s national composer, many of his tunes are still played today, and have been performed by The Chieftains and The Dubliners amongst other artists. O’Carolan’s harp now rests in the collection of the National Museum of Ireland.

The reverse of the banknote has an image of a wood carving that is found in the organ loft in St. Michan’s Church in Smithfield, an area of north Dublin.
